H. V. MCCHESNEY IN BRECKENRIDGE

Democratic Candidate For Governor Makes Three Speeches In Breckenridge County.

FOR STATE-WIDE PROHIBITION

The only man, Democrat or Republican, who has declared himself for State-Wide Prohibition made three speeches in Breckenridge county Saturday. H. V. McChesney, of Frankfort, and the best class of men greeted him at Hardinsburg, Irvington, and Cloverport.

Mr. McChesney did not neglect his pledge to do all in his power, if elected governor of Kentucky, for the movement of good roads, agriculture, education and a clean government. His most appealing promise was to give the people a right and opportunity to vote on the State-Wide Prohibition amendment. In plain words he promised to lead State-Wide Prohibition into victory and to rid the State of whiskey. Those who met him and heard him, have perfect faith in him, and if a man stands for prohibition, he must stand for McChesney and vote for him.

Mr. McChesney told what would become of the liquor dealers if they were put out of business in Kentucky. They would be put into better places of life and industry—his statement was verified by every town's experience in turning men out of the whiskey business and putting them into better places of work.

The Democratic voters of Breckenridge county who want to stand for the right cause that confronts the party today, should vote for Mr. McChesney.

Moorman Ditto, Morrie Kincheol and Jesse Whitworth came from Hardinsburg Saturday night to hear Mr. McChesney.

Mrs. McChesney was here and she is assured that she will become hostess of the governor's mansion next December. If her enthusiasm and optimism counts for many votes, her husband will be the next governor.

Mr. and Mrs. McChesney are delightful people, cultured and gifted for the highest place in the State's official circles.

G. T. Luckett Dead.

Hawes B. Eagles received a telegram Saturday afternoon from Will Luckett, informing him of the death of Gus T. Luckett, in New York on Friday. He was buried Saturday afternoon at that place. He had been ill for several months. He was a son of the late Dr. E. H. Luckett and was well known in the city several years ago. He was about fifty years old. He had been living in New York for several years. He leaves a widow, who was a Miss Holt, of Breckenridge county. His mother and sister, Miss Nina Luckett, recently visited him in New York.—Owensboro Messenger.

Beard Brothers In Hancock.

Beard Brothers, of Hardinsburg, bought and loaded a carload of lambs here Tuesday.

The load consisted of 225 head and were delivered by the following parties: Len Adkins, 11; Amos Estes, 9; Jas. Sturms, 14; Bob Steward, 50; Geo. Marsh, 35; Martin Minnett, 14; Cal Lamar, 70. It is understood that the price paid was 7c and 7½c. It is reported that Martin Minnett had the best lambs that were received, the lightest one weighing 85 and the heaviest one tipped the scales at 110 pounds.—The Clarion.

A Strong Letter For McChesney and the Right.

Dear Mr. Babbage: In your last issue I noticed some one wrote up Mr. McChesney speaking to such small crowds. I can't tell where this party got such rotten stuff as that, unless he got same from the Courier Journal, the whiskey organ. I am sure Mr. McChesney has been greeted with the largest crowds of any candidate in the last forty years who has made a race for the Governorship of Kentucky, and what I deem the most respectable crowds, who want to blot out one of the greatest evils that confronts the American people today, and I do hope and pray that the good voters and law abiding citizens of this county and State will vote for McChesney. He is the ideal candidate for Governor. I am for him first, last and all the time, against the world, flesh and the devil. Yours very truly,
E. E. Glasscock,
Locust Hill, Ky., July 12, 1915.

GOV. MCCREARY

Reviewed the 2,000 Soldiers in Owensboro Yesterday Afternoon.

The State Militia encampment is being held at the fair grounds in Owensboro. A reception committee was appointed to receive Gov. James B. McCreary upon his arrival at noon Tuesday, who reviewed the first brigade of the Kentucky National Guard at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

This was one of the most interesting features in connection with the encampment, as the reviewing of 2,000 soldiers is something never witnessed before in Owensboro.

The national encampment is arousing much interest in Owensboro, and the soldiers were given a royal welcome.

Leo Frank Attacked.

Milledgeville, Ga., July 17.—Leo M. Frank, whose death sentence for the murder of Mary Phagan was recently commuted to life imprisonment, was attacked by another prisoner at the state prison farm and seriously injured, being cut in the throat. Prison officials said the attack on Frank was made by William Green, who is also serving a life term for murder.

MODERN WOODMEN HAVE GREAT TIME

First of the Three Saturday July Barbecues Pulled Off in Style—Music, Fine Food and Speeches.

PLEASURE AND PROFIT.

The good-time picnic and the annual celebration of the Modern Woodmen of America held at Webster Saturday was an all day success. The event took place in Lyddan's Grove and a large crowd attended. A fine barbecued dinner was served at 12 o'clock with plenty of iced water and ice cream on the side.

J. V. St. Clair, Dr. J. T. Hendrick, Forest Compton and William Haycraft, the managers, were congratulated on their attractive program and the high-class amusements. Aside from the social past-times of the day, a serious and helpful address was delivered by J. W. DeHart, State Deputy of the order. H. V. McChesney, Democratic candidate for Governor, was billed to speak, but on account of rain the night before, he could not make connection. He would have been heartily welcomed by the crowd.

The contests were carried out to a letter and all the prizes given, except in the offer of The Breckenridge News which was made to the newest bride and groom present. Only one bride was there and she left her husband at home. The prize awards were as follows:

In the beauty contest, Miss Zoa Bandy was voted the prettiest girl and was given a kodak by the Bachelors' Club.

Thomas Taylor Hall, the four months old baby of Mr. and Mrs. June Hall, received a ring given by Dr. Hendrick in the baby contest.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Chism got the barrel of salt for the largest family. They have eleven children, and brought them all to the picnic.

Daniel Baysinger received a pair of shoes for being the oldest man. He is 84 years of age. Mr. Baysinger enjoyed the day and met many of his old friends.

A. J. Dye received a dinner ticket for having the baldest head, of which he seemed to be very proud.

The three-legged race was won by Morris Steward and Wade Bauman. The prize, $1.

Mrs. Eula McGavock won the wheelbarrow race. The prize, a rocking chair.

Miss Vera McGavock got a set of dishes for hitting the most dolls.

Owen Busscock was the shortest man present and was given a dinner ticket.

James M. Rhodes was given a suit of overalls for bringing the largest load of people.

MRS. BURKS DEAD

At the Age of Eighty-Eight Years—Born in Ireland—Funeral Monday.

Mrs. Nellie Burks died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jack Jones, near this place, Sunday morning. She was eighty-eight years old and was ill only two weeks.

The death of Mrs. Burks is the passing of one of the oldest natives from Ireland in this country. She came from the Emerald Isle with her husband, Cornelius Burks, bringing with them their first child. That was in 1866 when they settled in Canada, the birth place of their other children.

Mrs. Burks leaves one daughter, Mrs. Jones, and five sons as follows: Mike and Chas. Burks, of Owensboro, Tom Burks, of Texas, Dan Burks, of Whitesville, and John Burks, of Cloverport.

The funeral was held Monday morning and the interment took place in the Catholic cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. J. S. Henry.

Miss Nellie Burks, of this city, was the namesake of her grandmother. Mrs. Burks reared a family of splendid children, who were proud of their mother and devoted to her. Mr. Burks died ten years ago. They lived useful lives, which were best examples for their children.

FAIR CATALOGUE COME FROM PRESS

Ready For Distribution—Breckenridge County Fair Association Shows Persistence in Their Plans.

FINE FAIR EXPECTED.

Write today for a catalogue of the Breckenridge County Fair. J. E. Dillon will be glad to mail one to you and to any man interested in the premium list. The catalogues have come from the press of The Breckenridge News and will be finished by tomorrow.

This is the ninth exhibition of the Breckenridge Fair Association and C. V. Robertson, the president, is working with as much zeal as the manager of his first fair.

The catalogue gives a list of premiums that will attract a big show of live stock and agriculture. The prices of admission are reasonable for the people and their conveyances. Special trains will run from Owensboro and Cloverport each morning. The second day, Louisville day, a special train will run from the metropolis. Greatly reduced rates will be given.

Many Automobiles

One of the interesting features of the fair will be the automobiles. While no special show will be given, the popularity of the little Ford will be in evidence. There are, at least, seventeen automobiles in Hardinsburg, and a number of the county cars will be seen at the fair.

Showing of Live Stock.

Thos. O'Donohue, Geo. N. Lyddan, W. R. Moorman, H. M. Beard, J. M. Howard, Chas. H. Drury, W. R. Moorman, Jr., are directors in charge of the shows of swine, beef cattle, mules, saddle horses, racing and harness horses and different classes for the first, second and third days.

Flowers and Poultry.

Flowers and poultry will be given a great deal of attention at the fair. The cultivation of flowers and raising chickens are very popular throughout the county. The two do not go together in actual raising, but they are rivals in interest. Many fine premiums are offered.

Five Dollars in Gold.

The Bank of Hardinsburg and Trust Company has offered to the lady winning the greatest number of prizes in Floral Hall $5 in gold. There are a number of versatile women in the county who can compete for the prize. Their delicious cooking, excellent needlework and success in gardening will make the winning easy for them.

The catalogue pictures a splendid fair, instructive, entertaining and pleasant for a big crowd of people.

Date For County Sunday School Convention Set.

W. D. Smith, county president of the Kentucky Sunday School Association, has announced the county convention for Saturday and Sunday, August 13 and 14. The meeting will be held in the Methodist church at Hardinsburg.

240 Pound Pigs

With corn above 50 cts, hogs eat their heads off very quickly. The hog that takes two or three months to get on full feed never brings you a profit.
When you are ready to put your hogs on feed, begin with the B. A. Thomas Hog Medicine. Use regularly and watch your hogs round out into fat hogs in nine months—hogs going well over 200 pounds and as high as 240 pounds. Figure the average feeding and you will see why the B. A. Thomas medicine is a good investment. Try feeding out your hogs on this plan and if you are not more than pleased, we will refund the cost of the medicine. I sold at Wedding's Drug Store, Cloverport, Ky.

Homes Wanted For Children.

The Kentucky Children's Home Society has at present in its Receiving Home 2-8 children. This is an unprecedented number for this season of the year, but owing to the conditions created by the world-wide war, the Society is overcrowded with children.
We find it necessary to appeal once more to the citizens of Kentucky and ask them to take these children into their home. We have 17 babies under the age of two, 108 boys and girls under the age of seven, 75 of which are between the age of two and five. The rest are older boys and girls, between the age of 7 and 14.
The conditions in the work are serious. If we do not place these children promptly, we will be compelled to ask the Judges not to send us any more children until we can place a large number in homes. We do not want to do this, as we want the Institution open at all times to the call of the destitute, homeless child.
Will you not think of the need of each child for a mother and father and if possible, send us a letter telling us that you will take one of these little ones into your home?
Yours very respectfully,
GEO. L. SEHON,
State Superintendent.

Traveling Man's Experience

"In the summer of 1888 I had a very severe attack of cholera morbus. Two physicians worked over me from four a. m. to 6 p. m. without giving me any relief and then told me they did not expect me to live; that I had best telegraph for my family. Instead of doing so, I gave the hotel porter fifty cents and told him to lay me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and take no substitute. I took a double dose according to the directions and went to sleep after the second dose. At five o'clock the next morning I was called by my order and took a train for my next stopping point, a well man but feeling rather shaky from the severity of the attack," writes H. W. Ireland, Louisville, Ky. Obtainable everywhere.

Louisville, Ky., July 20—Here is what Charles Peetz, prominent labor leader, 101 West Market street, this city, has to say about Tanlac, the premier preparation, and the benefits he derived from the use of the medicine:
"I have been in a half-sick condition for months. I was all run down, nervous, and had no appetite. My stomach was out of order and my digestion was bad. I often had headaches and was depressed in spirits.
"I find that Tanlac just exactly suits my case. After using the medicine about a week or ten days, my appetite and digestion are much better. I now sleep better and feel stronger in every way."
Tanlac, the premier preparation, that proved such a boon to Mr. Peetz and hundreds of others in Louisville and Kentucky, is now being taken with the most beneficial results by many of our citizens right here in Cloverport. It is an excellent spring tonic, blood purifier and tissue builder.
Tanlac can be obtained in Cloverport at Wedding's Drug Store, and in Irvington by Irvington Pharmacy.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

What increase in power can I expect by using ether in gasoline and in what proportion is it used to gain the best of results?

The use of ether in fuel will give a slight increase in power, due to the more rapid propagation of the flame. One-half pint of ether for each ten gallons of gasoline is used for this purpose, but it is not recommended, as it is not economical. For getting under starting a mixture of one-half commercial ether and one-half gasoline is carried in an oil can. This can be squirted into each priming cup for the initial explosion. The car must have a cover on the spark.

How will incorrect wiring affect my motor?

The effect of incorrect wiring on the motor depends on how the wires are misplanned. For instance, if the high tension cables were changed around so that no one of them went to the right plug it would be impossible to run the motor, although an occasional explosion might be obtained. If two or three of the high tension wires were interchanged, but one or more were left on the correct plugs, then the motor would run on the cylinders in which the latter were. Where a dual system is employed the wires of the battery system may sometimes be misplanned without interfering with the operation of the magneto and vice versa. As a rule, however, the changing of the wires will result in the whole ignition system becoming inoperative.

Has a long stroke motor any advantages over a short stroke motor?

Yes. The gas after ignition has greater chance to give up its energy to the piston. A greater volume of gas may be gotten into the cylinder without increasing the heat. This means more power for the same piston speed.

How can I take up the end play in a crank shaft without putting in new bearings?

It is best to replace the bearings when end play develops, but if this is not desirable the play can be removed by moving the thrust bearing to one side enough to compensate for the wear. The thrust is taken by the center main bearing, which is easily distinguished by having large flanges on each side. Remove the bolts holding the bearing to the crank case and file out the bolt holes enough to permit the bearing to be shifted. Then replace the bearing and tighten the bolts carefully.

How will running with retarded spark make the water boil in the radiator?

Operating a motor with retarded spark will cause overheating by retarding and prolonging the combustion of the charge throughout the power of expansion stroke. Thus the cylinder walls are exposed to the action of the burning gases during the whole of the stroke instead of only during the time the piston is in the region of upper dead center, as is the case when the spark is properly set. If the spark is advanced to the point of most efficient operation the spark will occur some time before dead center and maximum pressure will be reached and the combustion nearly completed just after dead center has been passed. During this time, since the piston is near the top of the stroke, the amount of surface exposed to the exhaust gases is a minimum, and, furthermore, at this point in the stroke the compression is at its height, and combustion takes place with greatest rapidity. Contrast these conditions with what happens when the spark is greatly retarded. Let us assume that ignition occurs when the piston has half completed its stroke. At this point the compression is lower, and combustion is therefore slower and will probably not be completed until after the exhaust valve opens. The hot gases are in contact with nearly the whole of the cylinder wall surface for practically one-half revolution.

But this is not all. When the spark is retarded, as in the instance just mentioned, the motor does not develop full power, therefore for a given load on the motor the throttle must be opened wider and more gasoline and air must be supplied. The extra heat generated by the combustion of the increased amount of fuel thus adds its share to the already overheated motor.

My car is equipped with electric lights and would like to know if dry batteries would work the head and tail lights. If so, how many and about how many hours would they last?

Dry batteries are not suited for lighting the head and tail lights. This method would be entirely too expensive, as the number of batteries you would require would be great and their life short. Take your storage battery to a battery repair man that you are certain is an expert—if possible take it to a service station maintained by the maker of your battery—and have it examined. It may be that all it needs is an overhauling to make it as good as new. But even if you must buy a new battery it is better to do this than try to use dry cells.

In a gasoline engine, is any more power obtained from the explosion by having the spark plug directly in front of the piston rather than at one side in a boss or recess?

There are two theories relative to the location of the spark plug in a recess within the cylinder. One is that by having the spark plug in such a recess a spurt of flame enters the combustion space from the recess and as a result quickly ignites the charge. Another theory is that by having the spark plug directly in the center of the combustion space, or, that is, so that the spark plug points project outward into the combustion space itself, the gas is quickly exploded because it gives the flame a chance to propagate itself in all directions. Practice favors a plug which merely has its points projecting into the combustion space.

Why do I have difficulty in starting on my magneto in damp weather?

The difficulty you have in starting in wet weather is probably due to moisture short circuiting some of the wires. Inspect the wires carefully for any points that might be affected by moisture and see that all the insulation is in good condition.

How will I burn the carbon out of the cylinders of my engine with oxygen-acetylene flames?

An oxygen-acetylene flame is never used for burning carbon out of cylinders. Acetylene is of no use for this purpose, but by employing oxygen alone a very satisfactory job can be done. The oxygen is used because it supports combustion five times as readily as air does, and therefore, once the carbon is ignited, it will burn rapidly, although it will not burn at all in air. In cleaning carbon from the cylinders in this manner the first thing to do is to remove the valve caps; then the cylinder is filled with oxygen. A small piece of burning waste is then dropped into the cylinder, and combustion immediately begins in a very vigorous manner. In fact, sometimes the carbon is consumed so rapidly that sparks will fly out of the valve openings, and for this reason it may be advisable to cover the front part of the car with damp cloths to catch these sparks. From this it must not be thought that there is any danger of setting the car afire, because the continued use of oxygen has demonstrated that there is no possibility of this occurring. If damp cloths are not used the most that will happen is a slight marring of the varnish by the sparks. The oxygen is supplied from a tank in which it is stored under very high pressure, and, as the pressure at the delivery nozzle of the outfit must be small, a reducing valve must be used to bring the pressure down to a reasonable amount. Therefore between the tank and the tube that carries the gas to the cylinders there is a reducing valve that automatically lowers the pressure. A gauge is generally fitted to the tank to indicate how much gas there is in it, because as the quantity becomes smaller the pressure drops.

I have a leather faced cone clutch and wish to put on a new one. I want to know the best kind of leather I can get for the purpose; also how to put it on. Would asbestos be better than leather?

Either leather or an asbestos fabric may be used with satisfaction. If you use leather you should obtain friction leather, which is made for this purpose. In ordering the facing, the diameters of the two edges of the cone and the width of the cone should be given. If an asbestos fabric is used, care should be taken to obtain a piece that is made for the size of cone you have. Unlike leather, strips of this material to fit cannot be cut from a large piece of fabric. The thickness of the facing is important because too thick a facing will prevent the cone from properly entering the flywheel. One-quarter inch is an average value.

If you desire to buy a piece of leather and cut your own facing you should remove the old clutch leather and use it for a pattern. Before applying the leather it is well to soak it in a neutral oil to soften it. Care should be taken to cut the leather to the correct length. The best way is to first rivet one end and then wrap the leather around the cone in such a manner that it slips down over the smaller end of the cone. Then pull it tight and rivet the other end. Now push the leather up in place all around and it should be tight and unwrinkled.

The same advice applies to putting on an asbestos fabric, but there is less danger of the facing wrinkling.

Will you explain fully the method of fitting and lapping in new piston rings?

Place the cylinders on the bench and apply some ground glass and oil to the interior. The ground glass should be very fine. Then place the piston in the cylinder and work it in and out until the rings are well polished and fit tightly. Lapping is an operation which requires an experienced man. Furthermore, it is advisable to use an old cylinder wherever possible, as there is danger of wearing the new cylinder.

710 NEW MAIL ROUTES.

Rural Free Delivery Extensions to Benefit 87,850 Families.

Washington.—Establishment of 710 new rural mail delivery routes to serve 82,300 families and the extension of existing service so as to reach 15,400 additional families were announced the other day by Postmaster General Burleson. Nearly all of the new routes went into operation June 15.

Enlargement and extension of the rural service were made possible, a post office department statement explains, by a readjustment in April and May resulting in a reduction of operating expenses amounting to $511,202.

Orders are now awaiting the postmaster general's signature providing for new rural automobile service in many localities, as authorized by the last appropriation bill. People on these routes, when living within a radius of twenty-five miles, will enjoy local rates. The first of the routes will go into operation on Aug. 1.

LIVING COST LAID TO WOMEN.

Durand, Ex-Census Director, Says Homes Lack Efficiency. St. Paul.—Dr. E. Dana Durand, formerly director of the United States census bureau and now in the department of economics of the University of Minnesota, placed the chief blame for the high cost of living on the consumers. And those, he said, were primarily the women.

"If the home continues to be reactionary and spurns efficiency no amount of law or theory will alter conditions," he said. "Even if the women began changing their ways now solution of the problem will take about fifty years, for a complete revolution in the moral character of the public is necessary to effectually reduce the cost of living."

ITALIAN KING COUNTS SHELLS

Victor Emmanuel Unawed as Sixteen Twelve-inch Shells Burst Near Him.

A soldier in a letter to his parents in Rome relates this incident of the Italian king's coolness under fire. Along with the general staff, the king had visited an outpost to see how operations were progressing. The news of his presence was communicated to the Austrians by a spy. They immediately fired sixteen twelve-inch shells at the spot, some exploding within 120 yards of the king and his officers.

His majesty counted the projectiles as they fell, and then sat down on the grass and penciled out an account "to show how much it had cost the Austrians to try to take the life of one man."

Power of Lyddite.

Lyddite is a very stable compound. It can be hammered or burned in the open without danger, and it requires a fulminate or more powerful explosive to set it off. Lead peroxide is the usual agent employed. But here is an odd point about lyddite—it must not be left in contact with iron or steel. If this is done the peroxide combines with iron rust to form a very dangerous compound. Consequently all shells used to contain lyddite are first carefully tinned on the inside. Lyddite is six times more powerful in its action than nitroglycerin, and nitroglycerin in its turn is eight times more powerful than the same weight of the old fashioned black gunpowder.—London Answers.

TRUE WORDS FOR McCHESNEY.

Chas. H. Drury, of Irvington, introduced Mr. McChesney, who spoke at Hardinsburg Saturday. Mr. Drury said with all earnestness the following:

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Fellow Citizens of Breckenridge County: It always warms my heart when I can come in and make one of an assembly of Democrats such as are before me. The day is not far distant when we shall be called upon to choose our standard bearer in the great campaign for the highest office within the gift of the people of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, and I believe the citizenship of the country should learn and know of the convictions of her candidates for the various State offices upon all public questions, and upon those convictions rest a candidate's fitness or his disqualification for office. I wish to present to you a man who stands for higher and better education in Kentucky. A man who stands for better methods of farm practices, for better roads in Kentucky. A man who stands for State-wide primaries; and last, but not least, a man who stands for State-wide prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. A man who has the courage of his convictions and puts this first in his platform when announcing his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Kentucky. This man is the Hon. H. V. McChesney, of Frankfort, our next Governor, who will now address you. I thank you."

AFTER THE DAY'S WORK.

Personal appearance is wisely mentioned by a farmer in The Farmer's Home Journal, who writes:

"I often think that we farmers might well pattern after some of our city cousins in regard to cleaning ourselves up a little after the day's work is done. I know a city fellow who does as hard, dirty work as any farmer, but who wears overalls that he can slip off, and when his day's work is done he bathes, shaves and changes clothes often enough so that he always looks clean and neat. The farmer is king of the universe, but he doesn't look it when he gets too slouchy."

Dressing with special care and freshness for the evening is a splendid way for any person to crown the day's work. The child who is required to redress in clean clothes every afternoon before father comes home, never out-grows the habit and acquires a self-pride that is valuable through life. An interesting house-keeper decided she would not redress in her best clothes for the evening. She thought her husband did not realize her hard day's work when he came home and she was beautifully dressed for the evening's meal. She kept on working after he arrived, but soon she found that compliments were better than credit.

Now, like her city cousins, she dresses and primp with care every afternoon after her day's work is done.

THE TRAINED NURSE.

"The profession of the trained nurse is in my opinion one of the most blessed, sacred and divine callings that can be imagined," said Mayor Hickman in his address of welcome to Owensboro to the Kentucky nurses. The annual meeting of the Kentucky Association of Graduate Nurses convened in our neighbor city Thursday and Friday. The addresses were splendid and brought a deeper appreciation of the work of the trained nurse. Several American girls, belonging to families of stability and success, tried nursing in the war zone and failed. Their hearts were not in the work and the fascination of ministering to soldiers quickly vanished. Not only is professional training of the graduate nurse of so much worth in time of illness, but her qualities of patience, sympathy and consideration are the gifts of real value.

The trained nurse is encircled into serious hours of the home and the culture of her profession keeps every sacred moment of other people's lives silent forever in her heart. This is the spirit of the Graduate Nurses, who did not forget to pay homage to Florence Nightingale and Clara Barton in their gathering at Owensboro.

The program of the eighth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union Auxiliary of the Breckenridge Baptist Association has been announced. We have always taken an interest in this union of missionary women since attending one of their meetings at Walnut Grove. To watch their interest, efforts and progress and the enlistment of the young women of the county is an assurance of the sincerity of their work. The women of Breckenridge county are looking with eager eyes to the needs of the world and by their work at home are able to meet them. Many have caught the vision of the little woman who lived and worked unselfishly in this county. When death called her, our correspondent wrote: "Three missionary societies followed her body to the cemetery—her own, the Freedom Society of the Cumberland Presbyterian church and the Baptist Society of Garfield."

The tall, robust sunflowers that are growing in large numbers in Cloverport, might make a few pounds of butter for the German soldiers. The production of margarin from sunflowers is the latest device attributed to the German government to meet the expected scarcity of butter. In the early spring the Prussian ministry of railroads ordered all station masters to plant sunflowers in every bit of available ground around the depots. Sunflowers, it is claimed, yield an oil that can be used in the manufacture of substitutes for butter. The only seeds are valued as food for poultry and as a remedy for heaves in horses. These brilliant ornaments are a native of Western United States. Species grow in the great plains of Nebraska, in Texas and in Jerusalem.

Consider those in public work this hot weather. Do not ask them to bring home a loaf of bread or to get your mail. These favors are small, but those who are busy in an office or store are tired and anxious to get home, naturally they forget to do what you ask them. Instead, have a glass of lemonade or a piece of cake to offer them, occasionally as they pass by. And those at home, who have charge of the meals and the house, should be considered as well. Consideration will keep down the heat that is exasperating.

Not much society in Cloverport in the way of parties and the usual summer outings on the river, but many have enjoyed just spending the day with their friends. Receptions, parties, picnics and various entertainments have nearly taken the place of all-day dinner parties. However, the old custom of spending the day has been revived by constant rains, and friends and families have enjoyed pleasant days with plain, good dinners at home.

The largest blackberry patch in the South is near Lagrange, Ky., it being forty acres. The owners began several years ago with four acres. One hundred pickers are required daily in the busy season. The unemployed must be picking blackberries and finding cucumbers as we have heard little about them this summer.

People who read in the summer twilight should not forget how easily they can injure their eyes. When it is too early to go in the house under the electric light or by the lamp, the eyes should not be strained by sewing or reading in the light just before dark.

We thank our correspondents for their capable news letters this week. They contain items of more than passing interest. They are animated with the good fortune of their friends and express thoughtfulness of those in sorrow and illness.

The teachers in charge of the rural schools this hot weather deserve the co-operation of the parents, as well as the children.

EARLY FIRE FIGHTERS.

New York Had a Volunteer Brigade in the Seventeenth Century.

There was an organized fire department in New York city as early as 1618, when a fire prevention squad existed, with duties resembling those of the bureau of fire prevention of today. The older squad was made up of police, firemen, or fire-police, whose duty was to visit all parts of the city, which then extended from the Battery to City Hall park, and inspect the chimneys to see whether they were free from the danger. Those guilty of having chimneys in a dangerous condition were fined $1.50, which went to buy new equipment, such as fire ladders, hooks and buckets.

In the days of the fire police of 1648 the owner of each of the 200 odd houses on Manhattan Island had to have one or more fire buckets in his house. These were made of leather and cost $2.50. A local shoemaker got the contract to furnish 150 to the corporation. These buckets had to be thrown out of the houses when the watchman gave the alarm of fire. They were picked up by the volunteer firemen rushing to the blaze and used by a bucket brigade formed between the burning building and the nearest well.

When the wells ran dry the brigades sometimes had to make the river their base. Any one attempting to pass through the fire lines at that time was doused. The man who breaks through and tells the chief how to fight the fire is an evil that has sprung up in modern times.—New York Times.

TRICOLOR OF FRANCE.

First Adopted In 1794, It Fell and Rose Again in 1830.

The French have always favored the colors of red, white and blue, and throughout their history red banners, white plumes and blue scarfs have been largely used in connection with royalty and the army.

The French national flag, the tricolor, however, which combines the three popular colors of France, is comparatively modern. The flag was first adopted about 1794. A decree was issued which gave to all flags a knot of tricolor ribbons at the top of the staff, and later the red, white and blue design was chosen for the national flag. Some years after it was abolished for the white flag of France made famous by Henry IV., and it was not until 1830 that the tricolor came into its own again. Since then the flag has been the national banner of France.

The divisions on the tricolor are not all the same size. The red occupies the largest space, the blue is slightly smaller than the red, and the white is the narrowest stripe of the three. The space occupied by the colors has been scientifically worked out in order to make the flag visible at long distances, a necessary asset for naval purposes. The tricolor forms the base of nearly every flag connected with the army, navy and merchant service of France. The president's flag consists of the tricolor, with his initials in gold worked into the white stripe.—London Standard.

The Dog Team.

Now the modus operandi of a dog team is as follows: The leader and wheel dog are the whole works on the basis of 75 to 255. The leader starts 'em, he stops 'em, he picks the trail, he turns 'em. When he walks, the rest do; when he gallops, they gallop. All the wheel dog does is to guide the nose of the sled, materially assisted by the driver. The rest of the team merely pull and yelp.

From which follows that a good leader is a very desirable thing to have and a poor leader is worse than useless. The driver, at the handlebars, is often thirty feet from the leader, the dogs being driven tandem and controlled by word of mouth and a whip.—Outing.

Garlic and Milk.

The odor and flavor of garlic is due, like the odor of rotten eggs, to sulphur compounds. Garlic is a member of the onion family, grows in pastures, cultivated fields and even in the woods.

Garlic is a bad pest on any farm, but is exceptionally so on a dairy farm because of the strong flavor it gives to the milk. A temporary expedient is to keep the cows off the infested pasture at least four hours before milking. This will greatly reduce the bad flavor. Then if the milk stands at least four hours the flavor may disappear altogether.—Farm and Fireside.

A Terrific Conflict.

Caller—By the way your husband is carrying on in the next room he must be rehearsing one of his heavenly roles. Actor's Wife—Dear, no! He is having a frightful mental struggle. He wants to have the baby's pictures taken, and if we do some of his own will have to come down.—Pittsburgh Press.

The Right Verb.

"I saw an opera last evening."
"My dear, you see a play, but hear an opera."
"Not when society is out in full force."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Economy.

Husband—I don't see why you have accounts in so many different stores. Wife—Because, my dear, it makes the bills so much smaller.—Boston Transcript.

Repatee.

Mr. Dudds—Why do you always stand before the mirror while dressing?
Mrs. Dudds—To see what is going on, of course.—Puck.

Your duty is what the day demands.
—Goethe.

FAD OF THE MONOCLE.

It Was Introduced by a Dutch Dandy, Jonkheer Breelo.

One of the interesting things written about the monocle is that the fashion was introduced at the congress of Vienna, the congress which remade the map of Europe. Sir Horace Rumbold, in writing on the subject of the origin of odd fashions and customs, said that a Dutch exquisite, Jonkheer Breelo, was the first man to wear a monocle and showed the then brand new fad to the diplomats and others assembled at the congress of Vienna. After that introduction the fad spread to all parts of Europe, but took its deepest hold on certain members of the English well to do classes.

Toward the end of the first quarter of the nineteenth century the fad of wearing the monocle had become so popular that the writer of a book on the care of the eyes and preservation of the vision inveighed against it. The name of that writer was Dr. Kitchiner, and in 1823 he published "Economy of the Eyes." Among many adverse references to the monocle he wrote: "A single glass, set in a smart ring, is often used by trifling faddlers for fashion's sake. These folks have not the least defect in their sight and are not aware of the mischievous consequences of such irritation."—Washington Star.

GUNPOWDER PLANTS.

Many Precautions Must Be Taken to Avoid Accidents.

Workers in gunpowder plants whenever a storm comes up adjourn to the watch houses surrounding the plant proper and enjoy themselves till the storm is over.

Lightning is not the only danger dreaded in gunpowder plants, however. Metal is dreaded—its hard surface may cause explosions—and hence on the workmen's clothes the buttons must all be of bone.

The workmen's clothes must be pocketless so that they may not carry matches or knives, and a workman, no matter how daunted his tastes, must not wear turned up trousers since in gunpows mills is as dangerous almost as fire.

In all the buildings of these plants not a nail head or any sort of iron material is exposed. The roofs, too, are made very slight, so that in the event of an explosion they will blow off easily. The doors all open outward to make escape easy, and the plant is usually surrounded with a stream of water, into which the hands are trained to dive at the first sign of danger.—Cincinnati Commercial Enquirer.

Cyclone in Illinois.

There was a cyclone passed through the north part of Alexander, Ill., last Tuesday afternoon, being one-half mile wide. The cyclone tore up by the roots and wheat bundles were blown many miles away. After the cyclone a heavy rain fell, and all gray indians said that it was the hardest rain they ever felt in Illinois since they had been living here.

It has been fairly rainy here all this summer but the gardens look fine. The potato and apple crop looks good, but there will be but few peaches.

Verses Muentzer Wrote on "When I Am Dead"

Among the effects of Erich Muentzer, alias Frank Holt, who tried to kill J. Pierpont Morgan, was found a poem, "When I Am Dead," which he wrote a number of years ago and sent to his sweetheart, Leona Sansabugh, now his widow, in 1908. Several verses follow:

When I am dead
Perhaps kind memory will lose
The sad mistakes I've often made
And hold the good—yes, let the best
Reveal itself as errors fade.
Oh, Lord my God, I tell each day
That I may have some good to play,
But will the blunders, then forgot,
Give balm to those that now are not?

When I am dead
And broken, heartless sods of earth
Will mark where last I seemed to be;
Perhaps—I cannot know—there will
Be heard the voice of praise for me.
Oh, Lord my God, help me be strong
In trials much, or labors long!
For me, who live in hunger great,
All praises then will come too late.

When I am dead
If I the silence of the tomb
Could break, I would not think to stay
The eager hand, or loosened tongue,
But sadly I to all would say:
"Beloved, flowers now you cast,
No fragrance to hours past;
Belated words of love and tears
Will never ease the broken years."

VANISHING GUNS FOR AMERICAN SUBMARINES.

Officials Reveal Plans After It Was Found That Germany Had Secret.

The navy department has just announced that hereafter disappearing guns will be mounted on all American submarines.

It developed that American naval experts secretly have been working on the submarine gun for more than two years and that plans were completed several months ago to mount such pieces on undersea craft.

It is understood that the department did not divulge the plans because officers were under the impression that the idea had not occurred to other navies.

The announcement was made after officials of the department had satisfied themselves that it would be useless to keep the fact secret longer, because Germany already is using such guns on the U type of submarines which are now operating against merchantmen in the so called war zone.

If the present plans of the navy experts are carried out submarines of the M type will be the first to receive the new guns. The gun carriages are mounted after the general type of the disappearing guns which have been used for many years on land fortifications.

They are built so that when the submarine reaches the surface a section of the deck may be shifted, and the gun will rise immediately over the top. The mechanism is so perfect, it is said, that the gun may be raised, fired and lowered within a few seconds.

Each submarine will be protected by two three inch guns. One will be mounted fore and the other aft. By the use of these guns officials believe that submarines will be enabled to protect themselves from any light craft.

The M type of vessels, on which the guns will be tried out, are of about the same type as those being used by Germany in attacking merchant vessels. They are approximately 230 feet in length and displace 730 tons.

CHAPTER X. The Death Dance.

EACH day Nu realized that he was gaining rapidly upon those with whom Nat-ul traveled.

The experience of his other life assured him that she must be a prisoner, yet at the same time he realized that such might not be the case at all, for had he not thought of her a prisoner among the others who had held him prisoner, only to learn that one of them claimed her as a sister?

It all seemed very strange to Nu. It was quite beyond him. Nat-ul could not be the sister of Custer, and yet he had seen her apparently happy and contented in the society of these strangers, and Custer unquestionably appeared to feel for her the solicitude of a brother.

Curtiss, it was evident, loved Nat-ul—that much he had gleaned from conversation he had overheard between him and Custer. How the man could have become so well acquainted with Nat-ul between the two days that had elapsed since Nu had set forth from the caves beside the restless sea to hunt down Oo and the morning that he had awakened following the mighty shaking of the world was quite as much a mystery as was the remarkable changes that had taken place in the aspect of the world during the same brief period.

Nu had given much thought to these miraculous happenings, with the result that he had about convinced himself that he must have slept much longer than he had believed, but that a hundred thousand years had rolled their slow and weary progress above his unconscious head could not, of course, have occurred to him, even as the remotest of possibilities.

He had also weighed the sneering words of Curtiss, and with them the attitude of the strangers with whom he had been thrown. He had quickly appreciated the fact that their manners and customs were as far removed from his as they were from those of the beasts of the jungle.

He had seen that his own ways were more in accordance with the ways of the black and half-naked natives whom the whites looked upon as so much their inferiors that they would not even eat at the same table with them.

He had noted the fact that the blacks treated the other whites with a marked respect which they did not extend to Nu, and, being no fool, Nu had come to the conclusion that the whites themselves looked upon him as an inferior, even before Curtiss' words convinced him of the truth of his suspicions.

Evidently, though his skin was white, he was now in some subtle way different from the other whites. Possibly it was in the matter of talent.

He had tried to wear the strange body coverings they had given him, but they were cumbersome and uncomfortable, and, though he was seldom warm enough now, he had nevertheless been glad when the opportunity came to discard the lumbering and unaccustomed clothing.

These thoughts suggested the possibility that if Nat-ul had found recognition among the strangers upon an equal footing with them that she, too, might have those attributes of superiority which the strangers claimed, and if such was the fact it became evident that she would consider Nu from the viewpoint of her new friends as an inferior.

Such reveries made Nu very sad, for he loved Nat-ul just as you or I would love just as usual white men have always loved, with a devotion that placed the object of his affection upon a pedestal, before which he was happy to bow down and worship. His passion was not of the brute type of the inferior races, which attributes solemnizes the marriage ceremony with a cage and ever places the woman in the position of an inferior and a chattel.

Even as Nu pondered the puzzling questions which confronted him his eyes and ears were alert as he sped along the now fresh trail of the caravan.

Every indication pointed the recent passing of many men, and the troglodyte was positive that he could be but a few hours behind his quarry.

A few miles east of him the rescue party from the Greystoke ranch were pushing rapidly ahead upon a different trail, with a view to heading off the Arabs.

Ibn Aswad had taken a circuitous route in order that he might pass round the country of the Waziri, and with his slow moving slave caravan he had now reached a point but a few days' journey in a direct line from the ranch. The lightly equipped pursuers, having knowledge of the route taken by the Arabs from the messenger who had come to seek their assistance, had not been compelled to follow the spur of their quarry, but instead had marched straight across country in a direct line for a point which they believed would bring them ahead of the caravan.

Thus it was that Nu and Terkoz and the party of whites and Waziri from the ranch were closing in upon Ibn Aswad from opposite directions simultaneously.

But Nu was not destined to follow the trail of the robbers to where they were still engaged in repelling the savage attack of the fierce Wamboli, for as he trotted along with the dog at his side his quick eyes detected that which the hound, with all his wondrous instinctive powers, would have passed by unnoticed—the well marked prints of the hoofs of two donkeys that had come back along the trail since the caravan had passed.

That they were donkeys belonging to the Arabs was evident to Nu through his familiarity with the distinctive hoof prints of each, which during the past three days had become as well known to him as his mother's face had been. But what were they doing retracing the way they had but just covered?

He halted and raised his head to sniff the air and listen intently for the faintest sound from the direction in which the beasts had gone when they left the old trail at the point that he had discovered their spoor.

The wind, however, was blowing from the opposite direction, so there was no chance that Nu could scent them. He was in doubt as to whether he should leave the trail of the main body and follow these two or continue on his way.

From the manner of their passing—side by side—he was convinced that each carried a rider, since otherwise they would have gone in single file after the manner of beasts moving along a none too wide trail, but there was nothing to indicate that either rider was Nat-ul.

For an instant he hesitated, and then his judgment told him to keep on after the main body, for if Nat-ul was a prisoner she would be with the larger force—not riding in the opposite direction with a single guard.

Even as he turned to take up the pursuit again there came faintly to his ears from the jungle at his left the sound of a human voice. It was a woman's, raised in frightened protest.

Like a deer Nu turned and leaped in the direction of that familiar voice. The first wolfhound was put to it to keep pace with the agile cave man, for Nu had left the earth and taken to the branches of the trees, where no underbrush retarded his flight.

From tree to tree he leaped or swung, sometimes hurling his body twenty feet through the air from one jungle giant to another.

Below him raced the panting Terkoz, red tongue lolling from foam flecked mouth, but with all their speed the two moved with the noiselessness of shadowy ghosts.

At the edge of the jungle Nu came upon a parklike forest, and well into this he saw a woman struggling with a white-robed Arab. One shrewd brown hand clutched her throat, the other was raised to strike her in the face.

Nu saw that he could not reach the man in time to prevent the blow, but he might distract his attention for the moment that would be required for him to reach his side.

From his throat there rose the savage war cry of his long dead people, a cry that brought a hundred jungle creatures to their feet, trembling in fear or in rage, according to their kind. It brought Abul Mukarram upstanding, too, for in all his life he had never heard the like of that blood freezing challenge.

At the sight which met his eyes he dropped the girl and darted toward his donkey, where hung his long barreled rifle in his boot.

Victoria Custer looked, too, and what she saw brought unutterable relief and happiness to her. Then the Arab had turned with leveled gun just as the cave man leaped upon him.

There was the report of the firearm ere it was wrenched from Abul Mukarram's grasp and hurled to one side, but the bullet went wide of its mark, and the next instant the girl saw the two men locked in what she knew was a death struggle.

The Arab struck mighty blows at the head and face of his antagonist, while the cave man, the great muscles rolling beneath his smooth hide, sought for a hold upon the other's throat.

About the two the vicious wolfhound slunk, growling and bristling, waiting for an opportunity to rush in upon the white-robed antagonist of his master.

Victoria Custer, her clinched fists tight pressed against her bosom, watched the two men who battled for her. She saw the powerful hands of her savage man bend back the head of the doomed Abul Mukarram.

She saw her ferocious mate shake the man as a terrier shakes a rat, and her heart swelled in three primitive pride at the prowess of her man.

No longer did Victoria Custer exist.

It was Nat-ul, the savage maiden of the Neocene who, as Nu threw the lifeless corpse of his kill to one side and opened his arms, dung herself into his embrace.

It was Nat-ul, daughter of Tha—Nat-ul of the tribe of Nu that dwelt beyond the barren cliffs beside the restless sea—who threw her arms about her lord and master's neck and drew his mouth down to her lips.

It was Nat-ul of the first born who watched Nu and the three wolfhound circle about the corpse of the dead Arab.

The cave man, moving in the savage steps of the death dance of his tribe, now bent half over, now leaping high in air, throwing his stone-tipped spear aloft, chanted the staid victory song of a dead and buried age, while beside him his equally savage mate beat time with slim, white hands.

CHAPTER XI. Happiness?

WHEN the dance was done Nu halted before Nat-ul. The girl rose, facing him, and for a long minute the two stood in silence looking at one another. It was the first opportunity that either had had to study the features of the other since the strange miracle that had separated them.

Nu found that some subtle change had taken place in his Nat-ul. It was she—of that there could be no doubt, but yet there was that about her which cast a spell of reverential fear over him. She was infinitely finer and more wonderful than he ever had realized.

With the passing of the excitement of the battle and the dance the strange ecstasy which had held the girl in thrall passed slowly away. The rhythm of the dancing of the savage black haired giant had touched some cord within her which awoke the long dormant instincts of the primordial.

For the time she had been carried back a hundred thousand years to the childhood of the human race. She had not known for those brief instants Victoria Custer or the twentieth century or its civilization, for they were yet a thousand centuries in the future.

But now once more she saw through the eyes of generations of culture and refinement. Before her was a primitive man.

In his eyes was the fire of a great love that would not be denied. About her was the wild, fierce forest and the cruel jungle, and behind all this, and beyond, her vision wandered to the world she had always known—the world of cities and homes and gentle folk.

She saw her father and her mother and her friends. What would they say?

Again she let her eyes rest upon the man. It was with difficulty that she restrained a desire to throw herself upon his broad breast and weep out her doubts and fears close to the beating of his great heart and in the safety of those protecting arms.

But with the wish there rose again the question, "What would they say?" to hold her trembling and frightened from him.

The man saw something of the girl's trouble in her eyes, but he partially misinterpreted it, for he read fear of himself where there was principally self fear, and because of what he had heard Curtiss say, he thought that he saw contempt, too, for primitive people are infinitely more sensitive than their more sophisticated brothers.

"You do not love me, Nat-ul?" he asked. "Have the strangers turned you against me? What one of them could have fetched you the head of Oo, the man hunter?"

"See!" He tapped the two great tusks that hung from his loin cloth. "Nu slew the mightiest of the beasts for Nat-ul—the head is buried in the cave of Oo—yet, now that I come to take you as my mate, I see fear in your eyes and something else which never was there before. What is it, Nat-ul? Have the strangers stolen your love from Nu?"

The man spoke in a tongue so ancient that in all the world there lived no man who spoke or knew a word of it, yet to Victoria Custer it was as intelligible as her own English, nor did it seem strange to her that she answered Nu in his own language.

"My heart tells me that I am yours, Nu," she said, "but my judgment and my training warn me against the step that my heart prompts. I love you, but I could not be happy to wander half naked through the jungle for the balance of my life, and if I go with you now, even for a day, I may never return to my people."

"Nor would you be happy in the life that I lead. It would stifle and kill you. I think I see now something of the miracle that has overwhelmed us. To you it has been but a few days since you left your Nat-ul to hunt down the ferocious Oo, but in reality countless ages have rolled by."

"By some strange freak of fate you have remained unchanged during all these ages, until now you step forth from your long sleep unspooled cave man of the stone age into the midst of the twentieth century, while I doubtless have been born and reborn a thousand times, merging from one incarnation to another until in this we are again united."

"Had you, too, died and been born again during all these weary years no gap of ages would intervene between us now, and we should meet again upon a common footing, as do other sons, and mate and die to be born again to a new mating and a new life, with its inevitable death."

"But you have defied the laws of life and death—you have refused to die—and now that we meet again at last a hundred thousand years lie between us—an unbridgeable gulf across which I may not return and over which you may not come other than by the same path."

There was the girl he loved and sought, apparently unhurt, and two donkeys, and the dead body of an Arab, and the great wolfhound, looking toward his hiding place and growling menacingly, and before the girl the savage white man stood.

Curtiss was about to spring forward when he saw the man place the butt of his spear upon the ground and the point against his heart. The act and the expression upon the man's face proclaimed his intention, and so Curtiss drew back again, waiting for the perpetration of the deed that he knew was coming.

A smile of anticipation played about the American's lips.

Victoria Custer, too, guessed the thing that Nu contemplated. It was, wolfhound barked in its retreat at the sound of Barney's approach.

The beast bared its bloody fangs in an ominous growl of warning and then turned and disappeared into the jungle.

Barney advanced and examined the soft ground about the donkeys and the body of the Arab.

He saw the imprints of a man's naked feet and the smaller impress of a woman's riding boots.

He looked toward the jungle where Terkoz had disappeared.

What had his sister gone to within the somber, savage depths beyond? What would he bring her back to were he to follow after?

He doubted that she would come without her dream man. Where would she be happier with him—in the pitiless jungle, which was the only world he knew, or in the still more pitiless haunts of civilized men?

A moment later he had reached his decision, and with resolution strong in the very swing of his stride he entered the jungle, but whether toward the east or the west he did not know, for he was not there.

less pacing of Terkoz, the wolfhound, or hear the ominous growl that rumbled from his savage throat as he looked toward the jungle behind them.

The searching party from the Greystoke ranch had come upon Ibn Aswad so unexpectedly that not a shot had been exchanged between the two parties.

The Arabs, pressed from behind by the savage Wamboli warriors, had literally run into the arms of the whites and the Waziri.

When Greystoke demanded that the white girl be turned over to him at once Ibn Aswad smote his breast and swore that there had been no white girl with them, but one of the slaves told a different story to a Waziri, and when the whites found that Victoria had been stolen from Ibn Aswad by one of the slave's lieutenants only a few hours before they hastened to scour the jungle in search of her.

To facilitate their movements and insure covering as wide a territory as possible each of the whites took a few Waziri and, spreading out in a far flung skirmish line, beat the jungle in the direction toward which the slave had told them Abul Mukarram had ridden.

To comb the jungle thickly each white spread his Waziri upon either side of him, and thus they advanced, seldom in sight of one another, but always within hailing distance. And so it happened that chance brought William Curtiss, museum, to the edge of the jungle beside the parklike forest, beneath the giant trees of which he saw a tableau that brought him to a sudden halt.

There was the girl he loved and sought, apparently unhurt, and two donkeys, and the dead body of an Arab, and the great wolfhound, looking toward his hiding place and growling menacingly, and before the girl the savage white man stood.

Curtiss was about to spring forward when he saw the man place the butt of his spear upon the ground and the point against his heart. FARM BOYS IN BASEBALL.

Managers Think They Outclass the City Bred Youngsters.

"The other day I inquired of a major league manager what class of young men he wanted for his team," writes Hugh S. Fullerton in Farm and Fireside.

"Give me the farmer," he replied instantly. "The chances for his falling victim to the temptations of baseball are fewer. He may not be as well posted as to city ways, but in one season you cannot tell the difference. They come larger, stronger, live cleaner and think more clearly than city boys do. Besides, the majority of them have the right idea in view. They want to get money to buy a farm."

"Twenty, yes, ten years ago the major league baseball teams were recruited almost entirely from the larger cities. Cincinnati led in production for years, then Boston, then St. Louis. A dozen years ago 50 per cent of the major league players hailed from New England and from the Atlantic states. Now more than 60 per cent of all major league players come from farms or from small villages, and the farms produce a greater number of good players than come from any other place."

"Rube Waddell, Rube Markham, Rube Ellis, Rube Benton—a score of rubes have shown in major league baseball, and their nickname once was one of ridicule. Not now. Managers of major league baseball teams are looking for rubes, and when they say Rube they mean, not the mouth of the awkward recruit, but the clean cut, clean living boy from the farm."

WHERE THE MAIDS WOO.

Capturing a Husband in India is an Ordeal at Times.

It would be a great mistake to imagine that there are no countries where the bashful bachelor does not have to wait and be wooed.

In the Torres Straits Islands, for instance, it is the height of bad form for a young man to make the first advances in wooing. Even after the preliminary steps, which consist of the exchange of bracelets, everything is not plain sailing. A girl sends a message to a young man to meet her, and if all goes well she urges him to name the day. When matters have gone as far as this it is no longer necessary for him to play the part of the modest violet, and he replies, "Tomorrow, if you wish." Then they go home and tell their relatives, who promptly celebrate the occasion by a general melee.

Among some of the rude tribes of India the woman's courtship is a less agreeable experience. If the man of her choice does not respond she takes a jar of rice beer and sits down in his house. The women of the family know what the rice beer means, and if they do not want the marriage to "come off" they are allowed to use any means short of personal violence to eject the fair wooer from their doors. They may put pepper in the fire, drench her with water, or load her with opprobrious epithets, but to gild the man of her choice the lady has only to hold out for some two or three hours and the bridegroom is hers. — Detroit Free Press.

TURKISH SPY SYSTEM.

It Not Only Keeps Tab Upon Strangers, but Spies Upon Itself.

Turkey boasts of more spies to the square mile than any other country, as any one who has been to Turkey will agree.

The peculiar thing about these spies is that they themselves cannot be trusted, so that a regular chain of spies is the result. There are spies to spy upon the spies.

The government officials have their own spies to watch other people, but even the great authorities themselves are already being spied upon.

What is more, the method of spying is quite open, for the spies will stand by wherever two or three foreigners are gathered together and listen to the conversation. Visitors to Turkey naturally get worried over such attentions, especially when it might be their bad luck to be followed about for weeks or months.

It is the "uninitiated" visitor who usually receives the most attention, since he or she will carry on conversation in a quiet undertone. The person who knows Turkey converses in a loud tone for all and sundry—the spies especially—to hear that he is only engaged in pleasure or legitimate business, and the wise man leaves the topic of politics severely alone. — London Answers.

CAPTURING A MODEL.

A Complexion That Delacroix Could Not Let Escape.

Delacroix, the painter, was walking out one day in Paris with a friend of his when he fell into a brown study.

"What is up with you now?" said the friend.

"I can't get a certain shade of yellow," replied the artist.

"What sort of yellow?"

Just then a cab drove past.

"The very thing," the painter gasped out. "Stop, stop!"

"I am engaged," the cabby replied without stopping.

Delacroix started in pursuit and at a steep place in the Rue des Martyrs overtook the cab. Opening the door, he said in tones of entreaty to the passenger inside:

"Do please tell your driver to stop. I want your complexion for a painting on which I am at work. There is a color merchant close at hand. I shall not detain you above five minutes, and in acknowledgment of the service you render me I will present you with a sketch of my picture."

The bargain was struck. Delacroix got his yellow, and a few months later the "fare" received a sketch of his "Assassination of the Archbishop of Liege."

The People of China.

There are about sixty different peoples, or tribes, which go to make up the population of China. Practically nine-tenths of the population is to be found in China proper, the great majority being of the Chinese race. With the exception of a few Iranians and a few people of the hill tribes, all of the Chinese population belongs, physically, to various branches of the great Mongol-Tartar family. The government of the republic recognized five principal races when designing the new flag, which replaces the yellow dragon of the old national ensign with five stripes—crimson, yellow, white, blue and black—symbolical of the five races comprised in the Chinese people, Mongol, Chinese, Manchu, Mohammedan and Tibetan.

History.

History is a voice forever sounding across the centuries the laws of right and wrong. Opinions alter, manners change, creeds rise and fall, but the moral law is written on the tablets of eternity. For every false word or unrighteous deed, for cruelty and oppression, for lust or vanity, the price has to be paid at last—not always by the chief offenders, but paid by some one. Justice and truth alone endure and live. Injustice and falsehood may be long lived, but doomday comes at last to them in French revolutions and other terrible ways.—James Anthony Froude.

Soldiers and Mustaches.

The suggestion that soldiers should be clean shaven would not have commended itself to Victor Emmanuel II, who held it incumbent on a soldier to look ferocious. One of his first acts in assuming the royal dignity after the battle of Novara was to change what he called his "milkmaid's appearance" by applying black dye to his hair and mustache, which were naturally fair. This he continued to use until his death, always applying the dye himself, for he hated barbers or valets to come near him.—London Chronicle.

Selecting a Vest.

"Haven't you any larger checks?"

"No," said the tailor. "These are the largest I have."

"I fear you have not a very extensive line of cloth."

"These are about as large as checks come in cloth. I might possibly make you up a vest out of linenum."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Perfect Clinch.

"What a very fortunate woman Mrs. Tipper is! Her husband never spares expense in gratifying her every wish."

"Is he so very rich?"

"No, but Mrs. Tipper is one of those enviable people who can have hysterics at will."—Pittsburgh Press.

Which?

When a man insists on classifying all women as fools the evidence is weakly that either he or his wife married one.—Washington Post.
